A Letter To My Dad

Dad,

I can't believe that the day has come. My black king has gained his wings.

You were here, but now you're gone. I don't know how we will carry on. You taught me how to laugh and love, and those lessons will continue. Memories of your smile and your love will get us through these stormy days.

You were more than just a father. You were my guide, my protector, and my greatest source of strength. Your wisdom and your sense of humor will stay with me forever. I pray that I can live my life in a way that honors everything you stood for.

I wish I had one more chance to tell you how much I love you and how grateful I am for everything you did for me. I'll carry your memory with me in everything I do. I'll hold onto the lessons you taught me; your courage, your resilience, and the way you always put family first.

Thank you for being the incredible person you were. I hope you've finally found peace. I know you'll always be with me in spirit, watching over me.

Until We Meet Again,
Decima
